Financial Disclosure
It is the policy of AAPOR to ensure balance, independent, objective, and scientific rigor in all its activities. To this end, all conflicts of interest or perceived conflicts must be disclosed. All authors of an AAPOR conference presentation must disclose (here and at the beginning of their presentation/poster) that the individual(s) either.
1. Have no financial interest or relationship with a commercial survey organization or client that would benefit from the research results presented OR
2. Have a financial interest with a commercial survey organization that could benefit from the research results presented.
It is not necessary to disclose relationships with non-profit organizations or propriety entities that do not relate to survey or poling products or survives or could benefit from the research findings. Relationships of immediate family members with propriety entities relating to survey or poling products should be disclosed if they are of a nature that may influence objectivity of the individual in a position to control the content of the AAPOR presentation or poster. If you are employed by a survey organization and that is your only financial connection, this will be disclosed as your affiliation, and you should choose "no financial interest to disclose."
Do you have relevant financial interest(s) related to survey or polling products or services or clients? * O Yes 🔹 No
