ONLY 5 DAYS LEFT UNTIL 50TH CONFERENCE DEADLINES

Only five days remain (including today) until AAPOR's 50th Anniversary Conference deadlines, which all come at the end of this Friday, January 6.

FOR 50TH CONFERENCE PAPERS, POSTER SESSIONS, AND OTHER PROPOSALS:
Submit three copies of a brief summary (not more than 3 pages).

FOR THE 29TH ANNUAL AAPOR STUDENT PAPER COMPETITION, CHAIRED BY ELEANOR SINGER: Submit five copies of the complete paper (roughly 18-25 pages).

ALL of the above materials are to be postmarked or otherwise sent by Friday, January 6, 1995 (an absolute deadline, strictly enforced), to the 50th Conference Committee Chair:

Prof. James R. Beniger
Annenberg School for Communication
University of Southern California
Los Angeles, CA 90089-0281

You will receive immediate confirmation of the receipt of your submission. Final decisions about acceptances of papers and the composition of paper sessions for the 50th Anniversary Conference Program will be made by February 15, 1995; final decisions about the AAPOR Student Paper Award(s) will be made on or about the same date. You will be notified about the decisions concerning your submission shortly thereafter.

Email copies of the Call for Papers, Call for Proposals for the Poster Session, and/or Student Paper Announcement may be requested from beniger@rcf.usc.edu

Re. the NYT: I subscribe to it and read it every day. You're right; their coverage of Mexico has been very good. In spite of that, I'm surprised to see that in today's edition there's hardly any mention of President Zedillo's failure yesterday to deliver his promised address to the nation. As you probably know, he was supposed to give his address at 8:00 CST yesterday but kept postponing it while he and his team were continuing negotiations with various parties, especially the labor unions, regarding the new economic plan. Finally, by 11 p.m. they realized that they couldn't reach an agreement and had to go to an all-night negotiation session. He's supposed to give his speech tonight. The problem is that he failed to announce his economic plan before the markets opened again this morning. We'll see what happens today with the Mexican peso and with Mexican paper in general.

The country is in a real mess. Quite ominously, three "columnistas de Reforma" used the expression "civil war" the same day one day last week. Other references to that have appeared recently.

Do tell me about your meetings with Lajous. I take his appointment as a clear sign that Pemex will not be privatized. In fact, some of the "semi-privatizations" and joint ventures that seemed possible a few weeks ago, appear to be less likely now. He comes across as a more nationalistic person than either Rojas or Ruiz Sacristan.

Saludos.

Dear colleagues:

I am doing a communications research project. Does anyone know of a source for obtaining reader profiles for major national and/or international newspapers (such as the New York Times, the London Times, the Frankfurter Allgemeine Zeitung, etc.)? I am primarily interested in whatever demographic or marketing information may be available regarding the newspapers' readership or subscribers.

TOP 15 LISTS OF INTEREST TO AAPOR MEMBERS

Several AAPORNET members have asked me how to subscribe to various other lists on the Internet. One popular choice is POR, the list with the name most similar to AAPORNET. Devoted to the general topic of public opinion research, POR is particularly useful to those interested in polling and elections. Because many AAPOR members have professional interests that range far from these topics, however, some of you might be interested in how to join any one of the 15 lists (including POR) listed below. These are the 15 lists known to me that I personally consider of greatest interest to the various segments of the AAPOR membership (these 15 lists are all of those to which we posted the Call for Papers for our 50th Conference). Topics of these 15 lists include not only public opinion and polling, but research methods, statistics, survey and market research and marketing, new technologies, and social and behavioral science more generally.

(listed alphabetically)

Name of List	Title of List	No. of Members
COMSERVE	Comserve News Service (communications fields)	3,035

HOW TO JOIN ANY LIST ON THE INTERNET

To join any list on the Internet, you must program its list server with your address and name. Recall that a list server is a dumb machine for which only rigidly precise information will produce the desired effect. To join almost any list on the Internet, simply send a three-part, one-line command (and absolutely nothing else) to the dumb machine (which usually has the address: listserv@etc.etc); be sure to leave the subject line blank. The three parts of the command are: the word "subscribe," the name of the list, and your name.

For example, although it is impossible for anyone to subscribe to AAPORNET (because it is a private list, for AAPOR members only), were this not the case, here--as a model for you to use--is how I would subscribe to AAPORNET:

To the address: aapornet@vm.usc.edu
Leaving the subject line of my message completely blank
I would send the three-part message (leaving only one space between each part):

subscribe aapornet James R. Beniger

With this as your model, all you now lack are the list server addresses for each of the top 15 lists of interest to AAPOR members. They are listed immediately below (note the singular exception of ELMAR, the List for Marketing Academic Research, which is controlled not by a dumb machine but by actual human beings, who can read requests in actual prose):

LIST SERVER ADDRESSES: TOP 15 LISTS OF INTEREST TO AAPOR MEMBERS

COMSERVE	listserv@vm.its.rpi.edu
ELMAR	(request in English prose to elmar@columbia.edu)
H-AMSTDY	listserv@uicvm.uic.edu

REQUEST FOR HELP

Obviously I am not familiar with every list of potential interest to AAPOR members. I'd be very disappointed if I didn't learn from you all of at least a few additional lists deserving of inclusion in the list above. If you will please send me the names and list server addresses of your favorite professional lists (no sports or pornography, please), I'll post a summary of the best things I've missed in my Top 15 list here on AAPORNET in the next week or so.

As you get involved with the lists presented here, I hope you won't forget the list where you first learned about them and how to join: AAPORNET.

If you have problems, questions, or complaints concerning anything above, PLEASE DO NOT POST THEM TO AAPORNET. Instead, send them to beniger@rcf.usc.edu

During the same six-week period, 34 members removed themselves from the list. Of these 34 members, 3 have since asked to rejoin. The 31 members who remain off the list represent a dropout rate of 3.9 percent of those ever subscribed.

Thus far, 58 non-AAPOR members have requested admission to AAPORNET; all have been turned away with a friendly form message describing AAPOR and how to join. The AAPOR Call for Papers and/or Call for Student Award Papers has also been sent to these non-members as appropriate.

Dear AAPOR members:

A colleague and I are in the process of writing a paper on question wording regarding the inclusion of all third party candidates in pre-election vote intention questions. Does anyone know of some specific pieces of research that have addressed this issue in the past? To date we haven't found any but it seems as though there should be some. We have

David and AAPOR folk:

The Minnesota Poll did a split-ballot experiment in a pre-election poll last year, testing how the inclusion of third-party candidates in the horserace question affects candidate choice and the number of "undecideds." On the way to writing the proposal abstract for this year's AAPOR conference, we too searched the public opinion and political science literature and found little about third-party candidates. A lot about split-ballot methods and how Gallup used them, but little about third-party candidates. My co-author and I would be interested in any cites that others turn up.

Subject: Survey Research On Internet Topics

Recent survey research to study Internet topics, as conducted by organizations with AAPOR members and reported in the national media:

CYBERPHOBICS GALORE

A recent Gallup poll conducted for MCI shows almost half of the 600 white collar respondents admitting they are cyberphobic or resistant to new technology. More than a third do not use a computer at all, either at home or at work, and nearly 60% don't use voice mail. Two thirds do not use e-mail at work, and about the same number don't carry a pager. The most common reason cited for anti-technology attitudes was a fear of loss of privacy. Close runners up were worries over information overload and a fear of losing face-to-face contact with associates. (Miami Herald 1/2/95 p.22)

"GIVE US YOUR MONEY, BUT KEEP YOUR OPINIONS TO YOURSELF!"

A survey of small business executives conducted for IBM by Roper Starch Worldwide shows 65% of the respondents saying that building the information highway is a good use of government funds, but only 3% think the government should have "a lot" of influence on how the highway operates. Forty-four percent felt the government should have no influence, and 49% said they thought it should have "some" say in how things were run. (Inc. Technology Premiere Issue p.19)

An article by James Fallows in the Jan. 12 issue of New York Review of Books makes mention to the fact that article 4 of the Republican Contract with America (the "Family Reinforcement Act"), "requires parental consent before children participate in any federally funded survey of public opinion on sensitive subjects..." Recognizing that the issue is one of explicit vs. implied consent, such a regulation would have had an impact on several studies done by our organization during the past year or so. Does anyone have any additional details about this part of the Gingrich legislation?

REPLY TO 01/11/95 11:20 FROM AAPORNET@USCVM.BITNET "News and Discussion for members of AAPOR": contract with America

Before Newt imposes parental consent on minors taking surveys, it might be wise for someone to definitively establish when a survey becomes viable and takes on life. To my chagrin and everlasting shame, I must admit that I have had interviews terminated in the second trimester. To my horror, I have even witnessed respondents imploring -- nay, insisting -- that they terminate in the THIRD trimester!

Perhaps a waiting period of 48 hours would also be in order. Our youngsters are certainly the sweetest in the world, but few would argue that their innocence does not at times allow them to be cruelly victimized by unscrupulous social scientists and opinion-mongers (a very nasty lot indeed). A waiting period may be all it takes to prevent even the boldest, most opinionated youth from making an impetuous mistake and agreeing to be interviewed.

And, of course, neither a waiting period nor parental consent will have the desired effect until the youth of the nation are more fully educated about the alternatives to opinion polls. It is much easier to "just say no" when one's resolve is strengthened by the knowledge that there are more acceptable ways (such as fisticuffs, terrorism, talk radio, and the Internet) to express oneself.

SURVEY PROJECTS MANAGER
Survey Section, Statistical Laboratory
Iowa State University

The Survey Section of Iowa State University's Statistical Laboratory is seeking an experienced Survey Projects Manager to oversee its operational survey unit. The Survey Projects Manager directs 10-20 survey projects per year conducted on a contract basis for on- and off-campus researchers; manages 20-25 staff and a $300,000 budget; and consults with researchers on survey research methodology, operational plans, and budget estimates for grant proposals as well as unfunded projects.

Minimum qualifications are a masters degree in sociology, statistics or related field with at least three years of survey project experience, or a bachelor's degree in these fields with at least five years experience. Experience must include supervisory and budgetary management, questionnaire design, consulting with survey researchers, and familiarity with using personal computers as an office tool. Preference will be given to candidates who have a strong understanding of academic and government research, in-depth knowledge of telephone and personal interviewing, and experience with computer-aided telephone interviewing (CATI) systems and/or CASES. Salary from $35,000 to $55,000, depending on the candidate's qualifications.

The Survey Section was organized during the 1930s to provide consulting and direct operational assistance in all aspects of sample surveys, and to conduct research and teach courses in survey sampling methods. The operational survey unit in the Survey Section is a small group of highly trained permanent staff and temporary employees. Survey Section staff work directly with principal investigators in academic departments at all three state universities, as well as researchers in state, federal and nonprofit agencies. At the present time, all survey projects are unsolicited, and cover a wide variety of subjects including medicine, economics, sociology, agriculture, and public policy. The majority of projects involve telephone interviewing, although studies that require personal interviews or mail-out questionnaires are conducted regularly. The survey group prides itself on conducting the highest quality work possible in a supportive and collegial atmosphere.

Applications are being accepted through January 31, 1995, or until the position is filled. To apply, send a letter explaining your interest in the position, a resume, and the names of three references to:

Subject: The International Social Survey Program

The International Social Survey Program

by

Tom W. Smith
National Opinion Research Center
University of Chicago

May, 1994

The International Social Survey Program (ISSP) is a continuing, annual program of crossnational collaboration. It brings together pre-existing, social science projects and coordinates research goals, thereby adding a crossnational perspective to the individual, national studies. Each research organization funds all of its own costs. There are no central funds.

Since 1984, ISSP has grown to 22 nations, the founding four-- Germany, the United States, Great Britain, and Australia-- plus Austria, Italy, Ireland, Hungary, the Netherlands, Israel, Norway, the Philippines, New Zealand, Russia, Japan, Bulgaria, Canada, and the Czech Republic, Slovenia, Poland, Sweden, and Spain. In addition, East Germany was added to the German sample upon reunification.

The first ISSP theme in 1985 was on the role of government. It covered attitudes towards a) civil liberties, b) education and parenting, c) welfare and social equality, and d) the economy. The second theme was on social networks and support system. It contained detailed behavioral reports on contacts with various friends and relatives and then a series of questions about where one would turn for help when faced with various situations such as financial need, minor illness, career advice, and emotional distress. The third module, on social equality, concerned beliefs about what factors effect one's chances for social mobility (e.g. parental status, education, contacts, race, etc.), explanations for inequality, assessments of social conflicts, and related questions. It also asked people to estimate the average earnings of various occupations (e.g. farm laborer and doctor) and what the average earnings of these occupations should be. The fourth module covered the impact on the family of the changing labor force participation of women. It included attitudes on marriage and cohabitation, divorce, children, and child care and special demographics on labor force status, child care, and earnings of husband and wife. The fifth module on orientations towards work dealt with motivations to work, desired characteristics of a job, problems relating to unemployment, satisfaction with one's own job (if employed), and working conditions (if employed).

The sixth module in 1990 repeats the role of government theme. By replicating substantial parts of earlier modules, ISSP will not only have a crossnational perspective, but also an over time perspective. We will not only be able to compare nations and test whether similar social science models operate across societies, but also be able to see if there are similar international trends and whether parallel models of social change operate across nations. The seventh module covers the impact of religious beliefs and behaviors on social, political, and moral attitudes. It includes questions on religious upbringing, current religious activities, traditional Christian beliefs, and existential beliefs. The non-religious items concern such topics as personal morality, sex roles, crime and punishment, and abortion. The eighth module in 1992 replicates and extends the 1987 social equality module. The ninth module in 1993 is on the environment. It includes an environmental knowledge scale along with attitudinal and behavioral measures. The tenth module in 1994 repeats the 1988 module on women, work, and the family. It also adds items on household division of labor, sexual harassment, and public policy regarding the family. The 1995 module will be on national identity. It will assess nationalism and patriotism, localism and globalism, and diversity and immigration. 1996 will be the second replication of role of government and 1997 will be the first replication of the 1989 module on work orientations.

ISSP data sets are available from ICPSR, University of Michigan, Box 1248, Ann Arbor, MI 48106 313-764-2570. Subject: Call for Papers 1995 CONFERENCE ON POLITICAL LINGUISTICS

CALL FOR PAPERS
The Belgian Linguistic Association
1995 CONFERENCE ON POLITICAL LINGUISTICS
ANTWERP (Belgium), 7-9 December 1995

This conference aims at convening scholars from a wide range of disciplines, interested in the intersection of language/discourse and the political sphere (i.e. politics both in its institutionalized and everyday dimensions). The general purpose is to explore and deepen ways of analyzing language as a political instrument, a political theme, and a political domain. In order to arrive at a coherent agenda, we organize four sections:

1. LANGUAGE AND IDEOLOGY: The domain of research related to language and processes of ideological symbolization. This includes the everyday political dimensions of discourse, folk linguistic ideologies, normative use of language, and language-based reproduction of ideologies.
2. POLITICAL LANGUAGE: This includes political rhetoric, advertising, mass-media, propaganda, etc.
3. LANGUAGE AND MINORITIES: This includes the question of societal multilingualism and linguistic pluralism, language teaching to minorities, the role of language in minority policies, etc.
4. LANGUAGE AND THE STATE: The domain of research related to language and state control. This includes language policies and language planning, language standardization, language in education, language and nation-building, etc.

We invite proposals for paper presentations (30' + 15' discussion) and/or for special events such as panels or round table discussions (3 hours). Note that all proposals should specify the section in which they fit.

ABSTRACTS (2 hard copies) should be sent to the organizers before March 15th, 1995, and should meet the following requirements:

1. PAPERS: 1-page abstracts, giving a clear and sufficient indication of theme, approach and type(s) of data.
2. SPECIAL EVENTS: a full and detailed proposal from the convenor(s), specifying (1) theme, (2) list of participants who have agreed to contribute, (3) format (discussion, paper presentation...) and (4) short abstracts of the various contributions.

ALL CORRESPONDENCE TO: IPrA Research Center, UIA-GER, Universiteitsplein 1, B-2610 Wilrijk (Belgium). E-mail: ipra@reks.uia.ac.be.

Organizing committee: Jan Blommaert, Piet Van de Craen, Lieve Van de Walle, Jef Verschueren, Dominiek Sandra.

Subject: Survey Research On Information Technology Topics

Recent survey research on information technology topics, as conducted by organizations with AAPOR members and reported in the national media:

PUBLIC LIKES PUBLIC BROADCASTING
A poll conducted by Opinion Research for PBS shows 84% of respondents want taxpayer support for public television maintained or increased. (Wall Street Journal 1/18/95 B4) Lost in the debate over the funding of public broadcasting is the fact that government limits commercial advertising. The only way it could really survive without federal funding would be to become exactly like every other network -- complete with Cap'n Crunch commercials. (Telecommunications Policy Review 1/15/95 p.1)

NICE COMPUTER BUT YOUR SERVICE IS TERRIBLE
A Louis Harris & Associates poll of 250 information managers at Fortune 1000 companies found that 80% of computer product customers are happy with the quality and reliability of products from the computer industry, but that 66% were frustrated by the failure of computer companies to stay in touch after the sale. ROADMAP on LISTSERV@UA1VM.UA.EDU

The Roadmap workshop is back with a FOURTH session! Since the first three Roadmap workshop sessions were so popular -- over 62,000 people from 77 different countries participated -- I've decided to repeat the workshop one more time for those of you who missed it last fall.

Roadmap is a FREE Internet training workshop open to anyone who wishes to subscribe. The entire Roadmap workshop will take place on the ROADMAP list (ROADMAP is a distribution list, not a discussion list).

The Roadmap workshop sessions will cover: E-mail; Listservs, Majordomo, Listproc and other distribution systems; Usenet; FTP; Archie; Gopher; Veronica; Address Searches; WWW; and many other topics. As a number of ROADMAP subscribers only have e-mail access, the Roadmap workshop will also teach how to access many Internet tools (FTP, Archie, Gopher, etc.) using E-mail.

The fourth Roadmap for the Information Superhighway workshop will begin on February 9, 1995 and will end on March 17, 1995 (St. Patrick's Day) :) Workshop participants will be e-mailed one lesson each week-day during this period.

To subscribe to Roadmap, please send an e-mail letter to

which says

SUBSCRIBE ROADMAP Yourfirstname Yourlastname

in the body of your letter, replacing Yourfirstname and Yourlastname with your first and last names (*note: simply replying to this letter will NOT subscribe you to the ROADMAP list -- you must send a new letter to LISTSERV@UA1VM.UA.EDU to subscribe*)

For example, if you were multi-billionaire software magnate Bill Gates, you would put

in the body of your letter to LISTSERV@UA1VM.UA.EDU

Is this really "quantity" of life rather than "quality"? I think Phil Converse has done some work on time use which might seem pertinent to your research question. I'm afraid I can't get any more specific than that, though.

A Times-Mirror study dated May 1994 focuses on new technology adaptation and use--it includes an oversample of modem users--but it also has some good media use and other daily habits kinds of questions. Also it has quite a large sample (3,667 adults nationwide).

We (Atlanta Journal-Constitution) just completed a survey in Georgia replicating some of those questions, in our own study of personal computer use (among other topics).
The Times-Mirror poll was conducted by Princeton Survey Research.

We've also included some questions about commuting and how much time respondents have "for yourself--to read, watch TV, or spend however you want," for which we have trend measurements in Georgia. (That is, we asked those questions a couple of years ago.) Please e-mail me if you're interested in any of those items.

If you are interested in teaching in the social sciences in Eastern Europe or the former Soviet Union, an application from the Civic Education Project can be obtained from application@cep.polisci.yale.edu

Chris Owen
Program Officer
Civic Education Project
(cep@minerva.cis.yale.edu)

Civic Education Project is an international not-for-profit organization devoted to the strengthening of democracy in Eastern Europe and the former Soviet Union through the revitalization of the social sciences in universities and institutes of higher education. Through its visiting professor program, CEP sends Western-trained scholars to teach and advise at universities in Albania, Bosnia, Bulgaria, the Czech Republic, Estonia, Hungary, Latvia, Lithuania, Poland, Romania, Russia, Slovakia and Ukraine. Teaching assignments are initially for one year, during which lecturers teach university-level courses in economics, history, law, political science, public administration, and sociology, and also work on outreach and research. Lectures are conducted in English, and transportation, housing, insurance, teaching materials and a living stipend are provided to program participants. Faculty and advanced graduate students are encouraged to apply. Write for a brochure/application packet. Applications are currently being accepted for the 1995-96 program year. An Equal Opportunity Employer.

Subject: Paper Proposals Received

>From Jim Beniger...

Listed below are the first authors and key-word titles of the 185 proposals submitted to the 50th Conference Committee for consideration for paper and/or poster sessions. NOT listed are papers submitted as part of panel proposals and AAPOR Student Paper Award submissions.

Although the 50th Conference Program might not be able to accommodate all of these proposals, each one has considerable merit and is much appreciated by the Conference Committee. The listing here is intended not only to acknowledge receipt and to let authors check for Committee processing errors, but also to stimulate the exchange of ideas among AAPORNET members and, through you, other AAPOR members not yet online.

Key-word titles are a compromise between actual titles and the desire to communicate the essence of each paper in a single line of an Internet message. My apologies to authors who feel their own titles have suffered in this translation. The only defense is the convenience of 800-some AAPORNET members and the conservation of space in Internet traffic. It might help to think of the key-word title as a hybrid of tabloid headline, journal abstract, and classified ad prose, still today three of the more effective means of mass communication.

AAPORNET members will receive no further acknowledgment of their submissions; nonmember first authors will be notified by telephone or snailmail. Final decisions about the acceptance of papers and the composition of paper sessions will be made by February 15; you will be notified of the accepted proposals shortly thereafter. If you have questions or corrections to the list below, please send them to beniger@rcf.usc.edu

The Princeton Survey Research Center has put a resource for students on the WWW. Try it. I would very much appreciate your suggestions at this early stage and you and your students are certainly welcome to use it.

The URL is <http://www.princeton.edu/~abelson/index.html>

A number of ideas from POR and AAPOR contributors are reflected in the page, especially Scott Althaus' gopher and postings by Tom Smith.
